Duke Ellington remains a giant influence and is unquestionably one of perhaps only 5 of the most important figures in popular music today.

A prolific writer & composer, he predominantly worked within the framework of a big-band line-up producing music of extraordinary diversity.

The unique Ellington sound is based on celebration of its individuals. The music might be lyrical or triumphant, elegiac or celebratory but finishes positively.

Sadly Duke Ellington's death in 1974 preceded today's audio & visual technology and there remains limited footage of his charismatic and inspiring live performances.

The Duke Ellington Masters are the original broadcast masters of Duke Ellington and his orchestra in concert in Copenhagen during the period 1965 to 1971 and are perhaps the finest record of a truly great man and his music.
